Nibs is seeking draft choices in the first two rounds. He is offering a variety of later round picks and $$$$$. Look for Nibs to be the only owner to inadvertently draft a retired player.

Rumor has it that Jim's first pick will be from among: Jim Kelly, Warren Moon, Emmitt Smith and Barry Sanders.

Other early round draft rumors:

Zilber likes Herschel Walker...must be an Eagles fan.

Wayne likes Tony Sacca.....who?

Nibs wants Terry Bradshaw... 'nuff said.

Ying craves Bubby Brister...Steelers fan?...Nah...He likes Bubby's mother?...Nope....."He's got nice buns!"

Sled wishes for The Fridge...Do you really have to ask why?

Eggo..."No comment"...Is he talking about his sex life or draft preference?

Predictions

Eastern Division: Sam is the only owner with experience. Look for LA to be in the playoffs, maybe the wild card team which will come from this tough division.

Central Division: Probably the most even division. No team will run away. Toss-Up among all teams, except Pittsburgh. Dave is the only rookie owner.

Southern: Miami is the clear favorite. Eggo is the only coach with experience in the weakest division....by far.

More News.....

Jim only wants to draft 8 instead of the full complement of 16 players for his roster. I'll let you do the arithmetic.

LA team owner McClain feels incomplete not being in a power position. Look for him to politic this season for a newly created 'presidential' position to be filled by, surprise, this most Western team owner.

A bitter intradivision rivalry is already heating up in the Southern division. Seems like Virginia owner Rupert was on an extended trip to Dallas but failed to show up at some important meetings scheduled these two teams during the gridiron season.
